OCTAGONAL BUILDING

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1988.

Charles (Chuck) Logan was here today. He put a lot of work into the octagonal building standing south of the Grandstand at the Pinckneyville Fairgrounds. (City Park).

After leaving it for awhile he found upon returning that the squirrels had gotten in and had just about eaten up all he had done. In 1988 he has completed the work inside and out and the building is now squirrel-proof.

He stated that when he and his help were working here they commented several times that this building must be very old. The lumber used was pine.

He thinks, as I do, that this has to be the same octagonal building discussed in the April 4th, 1884 edition of the Pinckneyville, Il. Democrat.

Was there a particular reason for making this building an eight-sided one or was the builder simply showing off his ingenuity?
